ΔΙΟΙΚΗΣΗ
ΑΕΡΟΠΟΡΙΚΗΣ ΕΚΠΑΙΔΕΥΣΗΣ

ΕΓΧΕΙΡΙΔΙΟ ΣΥΜΠΕΡΙΦΟΡΑΣ
ΣΤΡΑΤΙΩΤΙΚΩΝ ΣΚΥΛΩΝ

ΣΥΓΓΡΑΦΗ: ΕΣΜΙΑΣ (ΑΦμΣ) ΔΙΑΜΑΝΤΑΚΟΣ ΕΥΑΓΓΕΛΟΣ (90037)

ΕΓΚΡΙΤΙΚΗ ΔΙΑΤΑΓΗ : Φ.352/ΑΔ.203/Σ.203/3-2-05/ΔΑΕ/Α3/4

ΕΚΤΥΠΩΣΗ ΥΑΕ
ΦΕΒΡΟΥΑΡΙΟΣ 2005

HANDBOOK OF THE MILITARY DOG'S BEHAVIOUR

CONTENTS

FIRST CHAPTER
INSTINCTS AND TRAINING
1. General Information.....7
1.1 The role of instincts in the formation of hereditary and acquired behaviour.....8
1.2 The relationship between instinct and acquired behaviour in training.....8
1.3 The instinct of establishing a pack and of socialisation
1.4 The instinct to play.....11
1.5 The instinct to hunt prey and the instinct to kill.....12
1.6 The instinct to defence……12
1.7 The fighter instinct and the instinct to kill.....13
1.8 The instinct to carry food to the nest and to retrieve.....14
1.9 The instincts of conflict, assertion and protection.....14
1.10 The instinct to exercise caution - weigh up situations and the instincts of fear and flight.....15
1.11 The instinct of possessiveness.....15
1.12 The instinct to reproduce.....15

SECOND CHAPTER
THE IMPORTANCE OF A DOG'S SENSES
1.A dog's sensory functions.....21
2. The role of a dogs senses as a means of communication.....23
2.1 Physical communication.....23
2.2 The advantages and disadvantages of physical communication....24
2.3 Visual communication.....24
2.4 Advantages and disadvantages of visual communication.....25
2.5 Aural communication.....25
2.6 Advantages and disadvantages of aural communication.....26
2.7 Communication through touch.....26
2.8 Advantages and disadvantages of communication through.....27
2.9 Conclusions about the role of the senses as a means of communication in dogs.....2.8
3. The particular significance of urination, defecation and barking as a means of communication between dogs.....29
3.1 Urination and defecation.....29
3.2 Barking.....29

CHAPTER 3
RECOGNIZING TYPES BEHAVIOUR
1. Necessary requirements.....33
2. Body language.....35
2.1 The significance of size.....35
2,2 The significance of eyes.....35
2.2 The significance of the tail.....36
3. Recognizing types of behaviour.....37
3.1 Domination.....37

3.2 Submission.....38
3.3 Fear.....39
3.4 Stress.....39
3.5 Insecurity.....40
3.6 Security-comfort.....41
4. Analysis of main types of behaviour.....43
4.1 Active Domination.....43
4.2 Passive Domination.....44
4.3 Active Submission.....44
4.4 Passive Submission.....45
4.5 Fear.....45
4.6 Stress.....46
4.7 Insecurity.....46
5. Aggression.....48
5.1 Aggression of a mother protecting her puppies.....48
5.2 Aggression because of possessiveness.....49
5.3 Aggression due to a desire to guard territory.....50
5.4 Aggression due to dominance.....50
5.6 Aggression due to the intrusion into a dog's zone of defence or that of the pack.....51
5.7 Aggression due to competition.....52
5.8 Aggression between males.....53
5.9 Aggression on command.....53
5.10 Treatment of dogs who show domineering tendencies and aggression towards their trainer.....54

FOURTH CHAPTER
TRAINING METHODS
1. General points.....59

PART ONE
ADDICTION AND HABITUATION
1. Training through addiction-habituation.....63
1.1 Beneficial addiction-habituation.....64
1.2 Gradual exposure to the stimulant.....64
1.3 Gradual increase in intensity in the process of contact with the stimulant.....64
1.4 Positive distraction.....66
1.5 Negative distraction.....66
1.6 Complete exposure to the stimulant.....67
1.8 Automatic Recovery.....68

PART TWO
Classical conditioning
1. The theory behind classical conditioning method.....73
1.1 The process of training with classical conditioning method.....76
1.2 Reversal procedure of classical conditioning.....76
1.3 The disappearance of classical conditioning of behavioural training.....76
1.4 The importance of classical conditioning methods.....77

PART THREE
OPERANT (INSTRUMENTAL) CONDITIONING
1 . The meaning of operant (instrumental) conditioning 81
1.1 Model for operant (instrumental).....81
1.2 Analysis of factors that constitute the model of operant (instrumental).....82
1.3 Reinforcement and Punishment.....84
1.4 Primary and secondary reinforcements and punishments.....85
1.5 Possible relationships between reactions and consequences.....86
2. Methods of operant (instrumental).....89
2.1 Training through motivation.....90
2.2 Advantages and disadvantages of training through motivation.....90
2.3 Training by use of force.....95
2.4 Advantages and disadvantages of training by use of force.....95
2.5 Comparison and choice between training methods through force or motivation.....96

CHAPTER FIVE
REWARD PROGRAMMES
1. What are the rewarding programmes?..... ..101
1.1. Programmes of eradication.....101
1.2 Programme of continual rewards and treats
.....102
1. 3 System of rewards for certain amount of correct repetitions.....103
1.4 System of rewards for variable amount of correct repetitions…… 103

1.5 Reward system for steady timing and correct execution of commands.....104
1.6 Reward system for variable timing of correct execution of commands.....105
1.7 Conclusions

CHAPTER 6
DILEMMAS AND PROBLEMS THAT ARISE DURING TRAINING
1. The dilemma regarding the choice of training method, the age and psyche of the dog.....109
1.1 The dilemma regarding the choice between classical conditioning and operant (instrumental) conditioning.....109
1.2 Age and training 110
1.3 Mental strength.....110
2. Generalisation and transmission of learning in training.....111
2.1
Generalisation.....
.....112
2.2 Learning transition during training.....112
3. Confusion during training.....113